

The Canadian Reconciliation Barometer 2021

Legend:

Non-Indigenous

Indigenous

People in Canada understand and acknowledge past and current harms caused by Residential Schools, but there's a worrisome gap between non-Indigenous and Indigenous people.

56%

78%

% who have a good understanding of Indigenous Peoples' experiences past and present

61%

82%

% who say residential schools harmed Indigenous Peoples

57%

75%

% who agree governments harmed Indigenous Peoples intentionally, systematically, for a long time

63%

79%

% who agree past harmful actions continue to negatively affect Indigenous Peoples

People in Canada know Indigenous Peoples face inequality, but Indigenous and non-Indigenous people disagree on how deep this inequality is.

41%

46%

% who disagree Indigenous Peoples are decision makers or leaders in key sectors of society

48%

57%

% who disagree Indigenous and non-Indigenous people in Canada have equal outcomes in life

35%

46%

% who disagree Indigenous people, communities and cultures are doing well

30%

38%

% who disagree Indigenous and non-Indigenous peoples are treated fairly in social systems

Canadian Reconciliation
Barometer

Infographics courtesy of Probe Research Inc.
For more information, visit www.reconciliationbarometer.ca